

The contract allows FZM to operate the large scale solar-storage IPP project in Eswatini for 40 years. In return, FZM will invest $116.5 million over the next five years for the first phase of the project. The photovoltaic (PV) park will be coupled with battery storage capacity and FZM estimates it will require an investment of $115 million. ...

Frazium Energy - part of the Australian-German Frazer Solar group - has signed a 40-year contract with the government of the Southern African kingdom of Eswatini (formerly known as Swaziland) for a EUR100 million ($115 million) solar battery project.
